Travel to Cambridge

By National Express coach (<http://www.nationalexpress.com/>)

There are direct National Express coach services to Cambridge which leave Heathrow approximately every 30 minutes. The journey takes about 2hrs 50min. From Stansted - the nearest airport to Cambridge - the journey takes about 50min. The bus station is situated under the airport.

By Train (<http://www.nationalrail.com>)

There is a direct Underground/Tube train connection between Heathrow and central London via the Piccadilly Line (marked navy blue on the Tube map). The Piccadilly Line goes straight to King's Cross from where you can then catch the train to Cambridge. The journey time on the Piccadilly Line is about 1h 15min into King's Cross. A faster line is the Heathrow Express which takes you into Paddington Station from where you can connect with the Tube. It is a 15 minute non-stop ride. You may take the Underground from Paddington Station to King's Cross, but bear in mind that if you are going directly to Cambridge from Heathrow, your total travel time on either route will be the same. Moreover the Underground connection at Paddington involves many stairs (no elevator) – not fun with heavy luggage!

There is also a direct train from Stansted. Train departure times are on visual display in the arrival hall.
